The evidences of the suffervary from a few inches up to ten, fifteen and even twenty feet in thickness. Unless the ore is very rich, it would not pay to work a small vein—asy anything under 18 one 20 inches. Silver lies in veins; coal lies Don't you wish that you could come along in veins, and the only difference, is the too collected the son Charley to him, saying: "I would not pay to work a small vein or lode of silver. West Virginians can understand why it does not pay to work a small coal vein, and it, therefore, will not cause them to study very long to find out why it would not pay to operate a small vein or lode of silver. The fact is a great many more people get poor fooling with silver mines than get rich, but now and then a fellow strikes a bonanza. The mines ran here, and in endless quantities and varieties. It is only a matter of judgment as to whether you are going to make or break. If you are "as wise as a serpent," you win, but if "as harmless as a dove," you lose, for some sharper will bamboozie on the proposed and the proposed of the control of the fact in store of the blad in some point of the fact in store of senting resignation to the fact in store in the sufferious. Recently a water works company ran a seven inch pipe from the Huachuca mountains, twenty-five miles distant, to Tombstone, and is furnishing water at the rate of $521 per year for each business house and family. This company expended about $5700,000 in the enterprise, and if the silver mines don't fail, the stock will pay big dividends, as the mining companies consume a large amount of water, which, with the demands of the city, will make the Chinaman says, will be "heep money." The fall from the pool on the Huachuca range to Tombstone is 1,900 feet, which makes the pressure on the pipes very great. I saw a merchant sprinkling the street to-day, and I am satisfied that he was throw in gwater 200 feet. They are not afraid of fires any more.

I saw a merchant sprinkling the street to day, and I am satisfied that he was throw ing water 200 feet. They are not afraid of fires any more.

Tombstone is 10 miles from Contention, which is its milroad station on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad; is 25 miles from Benson, on the Southern Pacific railroad; is 61 miles southeast from Tucson; is 20 miles from the old Mexico line, and is 2,319 miles from the old Mexico line, and is 2,319 miles from the old Mexico line, and is 2,319 miles from Wheeling. Now yon have it. It is not so hot here as at Tucson, because it is upwards of 2,000 feet bigher, being about 5,000 above sea level. It is in every respect an American town: The buildings are mostly all American architecture, while Tucson, and most of the towns in this country are Mexican. Sixty per cent of Tucson are Mexicans, and the street gabble is generally in Spanish, while here it is the frontier American dialect. The like of the saloons you could scarcely imagine. I don't think I put it too strong when I say every alternate businees house in Allen, which is the principal street, is a saloon. In all my observations, I never saw faro bank, Keno and three card monte houses hang out big signs on the streets and it came to Tombstone is largely Democratic, Tombst much longer will we have to wait for that good time coming in West Virginis?

Thus far we have avoided any "interviews" with the Indians. They are on the war path in the central and northern portions of the territory; but they have not got along this far yet, though they are expected before long, unless General Crook hurries the good Indians, Pays them four bits (50 cents) a day, and sends them out to kill their belligerent brothers. They do it, and usually come backloaded down with scalps. Since I hast wrote you, our party took a buggy ride seventy-five miles due south into the Santa Rita mountains. We camped out, and enjoyed the trip. It was an experience worth to us far more than the sacrifices we had to make. Our first night out we were caught in a terrible storm in the desert. It was indescribably grand, but we were badly frightened lest for six hours, night light down on us. I have been in a great many thunder storms in a great many States, but this was the boss one I ever experienced. If you will one a railroad map and look at Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, and see the interwoven network of the different roads, you can imagine about the shape the light-ning took as it darted over and around us, about and under us, as we sat inside our covered waxons on the desert out from Tancason. If I can avoid it, I will not be there any more. Bro. Cowden, with took it all quite comfortably, declared that it was the finest display of pyrotechnics he ever saw, or ever expects to see again. This is the liviliest little city of 6,000 inhabitants I have been in for many a day. It stands near the foot of a big range of mountains, and is built mainly of wood. Everything has a temporary look about it. But it is lively. Money is plentiful, and it is kept moving.

There are two banks in the city, one brewery, three daily newspapers, and one jail. Wood is $13 per cord, board $5 to $12 per week. Insurance rates are from 6 to 8 cents per hundred. About two months ago nearly all the business portion of the city burned down. Eeefsteak is only 15 cents, butter 30 to 50 cents, potatoes $3 to $4 per bushel. Minersare paid $4 per day, clerks about $100 per month, teamsters $50 per month.
